Of the Southern Railway at Asheville, after he had been sentenced by the Asheville Police court to serve thirty days on the rock pile on the charge of collecting for a ticket on that road a greater price than was permitted by court of the United States today added another to the series of decisions which have rendered notable the present term of that court. In both cases the right of the states to fix rates for railroad transportation was the issue and both involved conflicts between the federal and state courts. The decision in each case was ourts. The opinion of the court in both cases was announced by Justice Peckham and with the exception of Justice Harlan all the other members of the court stood behind him in the announcement of the court's findings. opinion in the Young case, in which he the eleventh amendment to the consti- Hunsden of the 11th. tution. He therefore characterized the of closing the courts of a state against the state itself and predicted that the result would be disastrous.

The two cases were so similar that both practically were decided in one opinion. The principal pronouncement was made in the Minnesota case. Justice Peckham's opinion was in part:

"The court has decided that by reason of the enormous penalties provided in the rate laws, by way of fines, the companies were in effect prevented from ever questioning the validity of nese laws, as the risk of property and imprisonment of agents in case the ompanies failed in their defense was too much to undertake in order to obtain a judicial decision of the queston of such validity.

"Such laws are therefore held in constitutional as they prevented the companies from resorting to the courts and therefore deprived them of the equal protection of the laws.
